I'm asked to give to charities and organizations all the time and enough is enough.
What they did was great wonderful and very helpful. however maybe they could look into helping a worker, staff, faculty, even student worker also.
We should vote each year on the Charity or Program we would like to give as a group.
I would like to see a program that would focus on the children of our students - this would be a unique compromise that would satisfy the need to limit charitable contributions in the community to United Way but also give to children who are in need during this season. Many of our students go without as they are seeking their education and those with children struggle even more so.
I adopt a family at Christmas through my church, so I didn't participate in the Angel Tree program. Angel Tree gift-giving is more personal and feels very different from writing an impersonal check to United Way. Both help our community.
I think the university should participate in other programs as each department sees fit.
This was a wonderful example of how caring and giving the staff at Missouri State University is. More than 40 children will receive a gift from someone at the university. Think of what a positive image about the university that places in the minds of these children and their family members. Also no act of kindness, however small, I goes unnoticed by God. I want to say thank you to those who organized this effort. It definitely brightened my holiday season.
I contribute to programs and don't go through staff senate. Thank you for having both programs for people to contribute to if they wish.
I am so happy that there are so many more children that will be having a wonderful Christmas this year. I think that the Angel Tree program is a great idea.
I support The Annual Fund and my church's efforts to support families during Christmas, so I can't stretch myself too thin right now.
